

Hyde Family Register

This family register begins with James Hyde and his wife, Agnes Clark, of Paisley, Renfrewshire, Scotland. We are fortunate to have been left with a record of his birth in Scotland, and of his family in his chosen country of Canada. I haven't yet found any definitive record of who his parents or siblings were (for our theory of who they could have been, see the Hyde Family in Scotland), but starting with what we do know, James was born in Paisley, Glasgow, Scotland on September 15th 1814.

We know little about his early life, except anecdotally that he may have liked a drink from time to time... Regardless, he seems to have carried himself well enough to marry a good wife and build a handsome family – beginning in Scotland, and carrying on later in Canada.

James was married to Agnes Clark in Paisley on July 1st 1842, and we have a Scottish marriage record to confirm the event. Agnes was born, likely in Glasgow, in 1824 (according to the records left by John Hyde). We have no record of her family except for one reference (in an obituary for one of her children) that her father was John Clark, and that he had been a surgeon in the Royal Navy.

In Scotland, James & Agnes had six children (four of them surviving infancy) before making the decision to immigrate to Canada. The family embarked on the trip in the spring of 1853, aboard the ship Juliet. We have a good record of when they were aboard ship because on the 3rd of June, while they were at sea, their son John (my great-grandfather) was born. According to the book Ships from Scotland to North America, 1830-1860, Volume 2 (Page 86, Clearfield/ Genealogical Publishing Co., June 1, 2009, by David Dobson), the particulars of the ship and voyage were as follows: The Juliet was a ship of 444 tons, and her master was J. Teulon. They sailed from Glasgow on April 20, 1853 with 101 passengers, bound for Montreal. The ship arrived in Quebec in June, so they were at sea approximately six – eight weeks. During that time provisions were supplied weekly, as follows: “2.5 lbs. biscuits, 1.0 lb. flour, 2.0 lbs. rice, 0.5 lb. sugar, 2 oz. tea, 2 oz. salt, and water, fuel, etc.”

By trade, James was referred to as a machine-maker or ‘boiler-maker’. Today, he would probably be referred to as a Machinist or Mechanic. After arriving in Canada, he may have originally had some inclination to head for opportunities farther west, but he found work in the Grand Trunk Railway shops in Montreal, so this is where he settled his family. James & Agnes arrived in Montreal with five children and over the next few years the family expanded with the birth of five more (four surviving infancy), including a set of twins in 1859. The youngest, Jemima, was born in 1861, and regrettably that was the year that James died at the age of only 47.

So, Agnes found herself widowed, with seven children under ten years old, including baby Jemima who was born two months after James' death. Despite this hardship, the family carried on and did very well: James' eldest son Richard had been an apprentice mechanic at a printing firm, but at some point "heard a calling" (according to Aunt Isobel Hyde Reckitt) and decided to become a Presbyterian Minister. He married Barbara R. Kerr at her family's home in Quebec in 1887, and by 1888 they had settled in Peterborough, Ontario where their four children were born. Later they headed farther west to reside in Qu'Appelle, Saskatchewan, and finally Regina.

Three of James and Agnes' sons, George, William and John remained in Montreal where they all became accountants. George and John both married and raised families in the city. George became a partner in the accounting firm of Court & Macintosh (later Macintosh & Hyde), while John founded his own practice which later became known as Hyde-Houghton & Co. John was also a founder and the first president of the Dominion Society of Accountants which became (as it is known today) the Chartered Professional Accountants of Canada. The youngest son, Alexander, went to Quebec City where he raised his family and was the Deputy Provincial Treasurer of Quebec for many years. None of James & Agnes' daughters ever married. For quite a few years, Jean Mackenzie, Margaret, Helen Rennie and Jemima lived together at 421 Claremont Avenue in Montreal. Their mother Agnes Clark died in Montreal, on June 13th 1889 at the age of 65.

This family register provides only names and dates – for more information about these people, please see my Hyde Family Chronicle.
